Program: RELATIONSHIP ASTROLOGY-- THE ASCENDENT AXIS

By Susie Patterson

The ascendant/descendent axis is called the "I/Thou" axis, and includes all intimate or partnership issues. Susie will talk about ways to work with relationships, based on the charts and will also touch on counseling techniques in astrological sessions.

Susie Patterson combines her depth psychology training with astrological wisdom. She earned a Masters in Clinical Psychology in 1975, and began a formal study of astrology in 1977. More recently she has gained advanced certifications in East Indian astrology, "Jyotish," which teaches us to live a more conscious life. In addition, she has received training in both Native American and Celtic shamanism in order to broaden her abilities to help and heal others.

Her approach is to consider each client as unique and deeply spiritual individuals on their own quest to bring light into their lives. Currently, her practice is based in Fort Worth most of the year, and in Santa Fe during the summer.

Oh, Those Stars!

The Sun entered the sign of Gemini on May 20, 12:06 pm. The Gemini New Moon will be on June 8 at 18 Gemini 01.

The Fort Worth New Moon chart places the New Moon in the eleventh house and unaspected. You may find yourself being more social and scattered this month. And you may be more mentally active and able to be more emotionally detached.

Mercury Venus and Jupiter are all in the eleventh along with the Sun Moon conjunction. Dane Rudhyar called the eleventh house the most shining house in the chart, and considered it to be the house of seeding the future after the culmination at the midheaven. He saw it as maturing and planning how to contribute to the future.

You might see if your thoughts and actions for the month are aimed at your goals and especially group goals and visions for the future.

The major configuration in the chart is a Cardinal T-square featuring Pluto in the fifth, opposing Mercury in the eleventh and both squaring Uranus in the ninth house. That may preclude any surety about outcomes of your visions and goals! Be careful how you communicate especially in groups, as communications are subject to being blown out of proportion and may cause unexpected results.

Alternately, it can bring situations and events that utterly transform your ideas and thinking. This will be especially true if you have any planets or sensitive points at 10-11 degrees cardinal in your chart.
